About Central States Communication Association

Central States Communication Association (CSCA) is an academic organization of communication professionals including, college and university professors, students, and K-12 Educators. CSCA was founded in 1931 to promote the communication discipline in educational, scholarly, and professional endeavors. The association, which consists of the 13 Midwestern states of North Dakota, South Dakota, Nebraska, Kansas, Oklahoma, Missouri, Illinois, Iowa, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Michigan, Indiana, and Ohio, is governed by an Executive Committee and is legislated by its constitution and by-laws. The organization has grown to become the largest regional communication in the United States and the fourth largest academic communication association in the world. CSCA has 24 Interest Groups, Caucuses, and Sections that promote particular communication areas or other member interests. The association hosts a yearly convention within the 13 states, maintains a website (www.csca-net.org), publishes a newsletter three times yearly, and publishes the journal Communication Studies on a quarterly basis as well as the Journal of Communication Pedagogy on an annual basis.

Dear Colleagues,

Welcome to Milwaukee, Wisconsin and the 87th annual meeting of the Central States Communication Association! On behalf of the Executive Board, we are so pleased you are here!

We hope your experience at CSCA 2018 will be an engaging one. The conference is packed full of meaningful activities from the preconference to the short courses, our CSCA Scholar Conversations, Honor’s Undergraduate Conference, and the exhibit hall. The papers and panels look absolutely fantastic this year! I also hope you will enjoy your experience in Milwaukee, taking in the great restaurants and other venues in the area surrounding the conference hotel and beyond. Please take advantage of all this great city has to offer!

I would like to sincerely thank CSCA First Vice President Amy Aldridge Sanford for her innovative thought and dedicated effort as the primary program planner. I also offer my gratitude to Jimmie Manning, our Executive Director. Jimmie has done so much to further build the reputation of the association. Many thanks also go out to the executive committee, program planners, volunteers, reviewers and to all those who offered their valuable service behind the scenes. And, of course, this conference would not be what it is without the presenters whose ideas contribute to our discipline in such meaningful ways.

I am so proud to see how CSCA continues to grow and thrive. Comm Studies reputation continues to expand and it will be exciting to see the first issue of the Journal of Communication Pedagogy.

Difference is a fantastic conference theme. Based on the submissions, CSCA members have thought about this theme creatively and critically. I am confident your conference experience will be engaging. I hope as you reflect on the conversations you take in part in during the conference and the ideas you actively listen to in the sessions that it will be impactful in how you think about pertinent issues. I further hope that you will engage with other others in your communities, making a Difference by continuing these conversations and enacting change.

Thank you all for your dedication to CSCA. It’s been a true honor to serve the association.

Sincerely,
Blair Thompson
CSCA President

Hello Friends:

Welcome to the 87th annual meeting of one of the finest professional organizations around – the Central States Communication Association. During the next few days, we will have a great time teaching and learning, networking, celebrating each other, and exploring the beautiful, vibrant city of Milwaukee.

This program is made up of 800 communication experts who are undergraduate and graduate students, independent researchers, faculty members, and community leaders. These folks staff about 270 sessions, many of which focus on our conference theme of Difference. Beyond the traditional panel format, we also have a Faculty Learning Community, keynote address, master classes and scholar conversations with some of our most respected academics, yoga, receptions, a debate, and a drag show to celebrate the service of outgoing Executive Director Jimmie Manning. There is something for everybody at this conference.

Of course, none of this would be possible without the units’ hardworking program planners, CSCA executive team and conference staff, reviewers, local arrangements, student volunteers, and Kathie Cesa with Member Services. A special thank you to Chad McBride for planning the pre conference on public scholarship and to Blair Thompson for planning the Undergraduate Honors Research Conference and mentoring me throughout the planning process.

I am fortunate to have very good friends and colleagues who are as committed to the success of our conference as much as I am: Kristopher Copeland, Stephanie Rollie Rodriguez, Dawn Braithwaite, Malynnda Johnson, Joy Daggs, Scott Myers, Jennifer Willis-Rivera, Rebecca Imes, Danielle Stern, Juddi Trent, Kellie Smith, Sandra Pensoneau-Conway, Larry Frey, and my boss Kelly Quintanilla. I have counted on each of you for years, and my debt is enormous.

Anyone who has spent a minute with me knows my soft spot for my forever students, many of whom are on the program and have been my biggest cheerleaders throughout this process: Molly Turner, Jennifer Martin Emami, Kyle Rudick, Kat Golsan, Elaina Ross, Chris Rudick, Shawna Blake, Sarah Turner McGowen, Heather Selim, and Bukky Babalola. I cannot wait until one of you plans this conference. It better be awesome.

My friends, it has been an honor to plan this multi-day program for you. I hope to see lots of smiles and hear lots of great conversations during the next few days. Please enjoy the city, the scholarship, and each other.

Sincerely,

Amy Aldridge Sanford

Central States Communication Association Preconference:
Beyond Academia: Translating Communication Research for Public Audiences and Social Change

Sponsor: M. Chad McBride, Second Vice President
Chair: M. Chad McBride, Second Vice President
Presenters: Betsy Wackernagel Bach, University of Montana
Lawrence R. Frey, University of Colorado
Amanda Holman, Creighton University
Sandra G. Petronio, Indiana University Purdue University, Indianapolis
Stacy Tye-Williams, Iowa State University

Scholars in the Central States Communication Association and the Communication Studies discipline have a strong record of scholarship with the potential to contribute to discourses in the popular media, to make positive change in our communities, and to help the lives of people in different contexts. While our textbooks and classrooms are a place where this scholarship is translated for students, the goal of this preconference is to think about ways that we can translate our scholarship more audiences reaching beyond our campuses and academic conversations. The panelists invited to participate have had success with either getting their work into popular media and/or using their communication scholarship for social change. We will learn from their strategies and use the time to brainstorm additional ways that we can take our work into these different contexts.

Anyone attending this preconference session must register in advance. Please visit the CSCA website to check availability and to register.

Conference Yoga

Sponsor: Amy Aldridge Sanford, First Vice President
Presenter: Danielle M. Stern, Christopher Newport University

Begin your conference morning with yoga suitable for all levels. Danielle Stern, a member of CSCA since 2006 and a certified yoga instructor since 2015, will guide us through gentle breathing practices, a beginner-friendly flow, and a brief meditation. Danielle is the co-founder of Bhav Brigade, a collective of teachers dedicated to philanthropic, inclusive yoga. Although class is free, attendees are encouraged to donate to the YWCA of Southeast Wisconsin if you are able. A yoga mat or towel is encouraged, but not required, to make your practice more comfortable.

Differentiating Between a Great Conference and a Blah Conference: Tips for Getting the Most Out of Your CSCA Convention

Sponsor: Amy Aldridge Sanford, First Vice President
Chair: Hsun-Yu (Sharon) Chuang, Denison University

Presenters: DeAnne Priddis, Middle Tennessee State University
Kristine M. Nicolini, University of Wisconsin, Oshkosh

Central States presents many unique opportunities to create powerful connections intellectually, professionally, and socially. This workshop provides new and returning CSCA members and students the opportunity to learn how to maximum their conference experience at this year’s Central States Communication Association convention. The audience will learn how CSCA offers many great ways to make a difference as you get involved, build relationships and collaborations, and have fun. During our time together, we will discuss: Planning Your Itinerary, Networking, Marketing Yourself, Socializing, Down Time, and After You Get Home.
Feminism and Representations of Gender in Popular Culture

Sponsor: Women’s Caucus
Chair: Becky Timmerman DeGreeff, Kansas State University, Polytechnic Campus
Respondent: Tennley A. Vik, Emporia State University

The Construction of Difference: SuicideGirls and a Rhetoric of Contradiction
Lara C. Stache, Governor’s State University
Rachel D. Davidson, Hanover College

“I’m Your Person”: Television Narrates Female Friendships in the Workplace from Cagney and Lacey to Grey’s Anatomy
Kathleen M. Turner, Independent Scholar
Jennifer C. Dunn, Dominican University

Not a Barbie Girl, in a Barbie World: The Impact of Barbie on Body Image and Self-Esteem
Victoria McDermott, University of Alaska, Fairbanks

Feminism challenges the ways in which gendered representations are articulated through various forms of popular culture. Gender circulates and evolves through a wide variety of mediums ranging from children’s toys to television shows to online communities. This space provides an opportunity to examine discourses of popular culture that intersect with concerns of feminism.

Interpersonal Communication is Political

Sponsor: Interpersonal and Small Group Communication Interest Group
Chair: Jacki Willenborg, University of Wisconsin, Milwaukee

Presenters: Erin Sahlstein Parcell, University of Wisconsin, Milwaukee
Karla Mason Bergen, College of Saint Mary
Benjamin M. A. Baker, University of Northern Iowa
Rebecca M. Johnson, University of Kansas
Katherine J. Denker, Ball State University

Scholars will discuss future “critical” directions of interpersonal and family communication research. Panelists will speak, in part, from four positions based in Suter’s (2017) Critical Interpersonal and Family Communication (CIFC) framework, interpersonal communication scholarship needs to a) study power, b) engage relationships between the public sphere and private interaction, c) facilitate positive social change, and d) recognize the importance of researcher reflexivity]. Audience participation will be encouraged and welcomed.
When Your Disorder Makes You Different: Examining the Intersections of Stigma and Disease

Sponsor: Health Communication Interest Group
Chair: Susan Wildermuth, University of Wisconsin, Whitewater

Presenters: Tara Walker, University of Colorado, Boulder
Mark A. Rademacher, Butler University
Brian Rogers, University of Wisconsin, Whitewater
Donovan Hemphill, University of Wisconsin, Whitewater
Kate Ksobiech, University of Wisconsin, Whitewater

This panel examines different ways that health issues are stigmatized in our culture. One panel member examines how stigma toward mental illness is impacted by popular media representations of the mentally ill. Another explores the ways in which big-pharma advertising campaigns may deliberately exacerbate stigma in order to encourage their target audiences to purchase drugs to reduce stigmatized symptoms. The final two panelists look at a myriad of intersections between stigma, drug-use, and health.

A Difference of Opinion Regarding Patriotism: A Discussion of Flag Protests as Confrontational Rhetoric

Sponsor: Rhetorical Theory and Criticism Interest Group
Chair: William Ross Cooney, University of Nebraska, Lincoln

Presenters: Brenda Ahntholz, Ohlone College
Jacqueline A. Irwin, California State University, Sacramento
Krista Phair, Winona State University
Kirsten Theye, Concordia College, Moorhead

On September 22, 2017 President Trump suggested that NFL players who participated in anthem protests should be fired, leading to an escalation of the protests and opening a public dialogue about the appropriateness of protest using national symbols. This debate is not new, nor is the NFL a unique site of protest. Panelists will examine the current debate regarding the NFL protests during the National Anthem and past events such as the Dread Scott art exhibition, flag burning during the Vietnam War, and student protests of compulsory participation in schools and explore the implications of such confrontational rhetoric.
Seeking a Better Future—College, Civility, and Communication in a World of Differences

Kathleen Edelmayer, Madonna University

Ten Lessons for Students and Everyone Else from Reclaiming Civility in the Public Square
Michael McDonald, University of Missouri, Kansas City

As educators, we must confront incivility in our classrooms. When students reject the good of the community for their own self-interests, attack those who are different from them, select offensive speech topics, or are generally rude and uncivil in class discussions, we can struggle to reply. Each presenter will briefly summarize a book on civility, suggest potential excerpts to use in courses, and discuss lessons/activities we can use in our classroom.

Jihyun Kim, University of Central Florida
Hocheol Yang, Temple University

An Exploratory Study of Argument Quality and Deliberation on Facebook
Jessica R. Snitko-Welch, Purdue University

These studies investigate and compare how media users interact with humans and virtual characters, the role of metaphor and storytelling in those interactions, and the lack of deliberation and argument quality on Facebook. They explore the experience of the user in virtual worlds, the internet, social media and when listening to the radio. The discussion will inform those who build personas, computer or face-to-face, for mediated relationships and all who find themselves immersed in these relationships every day.
Giving Voice to Difference: Creating Student Agency in the Classroom

Co-Sponsors: Communication Education Interest Group
Basic Course Interest Group

Chair: Julie C. Allee, Ivy Tech Community College of Indiana

Presenters: Cassandra L. Secrease, University of Dayton
Cynthia Duquette Smith, Indiana University
Aimee A. Sorensen, University of South Dakota
James M. Schnoebelen, Washburn University

Encouraging students to take charge of their learning is a challenge many of us face. One possible solution is to open a space within our courses for student agency. The hallmarks of such course design are living into the differences both students and faculty bring to the classroom and allowing multiple voices to be heard. This panel will discuss innovative ways to create venues for student self-expression while maintaining academic rigor.

The Past, Present, and Future of SOGI

Sponsor: Sexual Orientation and Gender Identity Caucus

Chair: Tim McKenna-Buchanan, Manchester University

Presenters: Jimmie Manning, Northern Illinois University
Tony E. Adams, Bradley University
Ahmet Atay, College of Wooster
Stephanie L. Young, University of Southern Indiana

In this panel, past chairs and influential members converge to discuss the founding of SOGI, its history, where the caucus is today, and its future. The goal of this panel is to facilitate an open dialogue with the presenters and attendees about where the caucus fits into the contemporary landscape of gender, sex, and sexuality and brainstorm prospective directions for the future.
Connecting the Classroom to the Organization: Projects for Teaching Business Communication

_Vickie Champ Ellis_, Oklahoma Baptist University
_Kaylene Barbe_, Oklahoma Baptist University
_Ann McNellis_, Oklahoma Baptist University
_Braden East_, Oklahoma Baptist University

Effectively teaching the business communication course requires projects with clear application to the world of practice. This panel features three such projects and will allow time for sharing ideas among panelists and audience members.

Typos, Tumbles, and Toilet Paper: Scholarly Mistakes that Can Bite You in the Class

Sponsor: Graduate Student Caucus
Chair: Maureen J. Wieland, Purdue University

Presenters:

_Benjamin Davis_, University of Wisconsin, Milwaukee
_Riley Richards_, University of Wisconsin, Milwaukee
_Austin J. Beattie_, University of Iowa
_Megan Kendall_, Purdue University
_Chelsea Moss_, Purdue University

As graduate students, mistakes happen . . . frequently. But these faux pas can create a space for learning. This discussion panel represents the complex roles of graduate students (student, researcher, instructor, and industry-bound) and the ways in which the panelists have overcome mistakes throughout their graduate careers. From major typos on a publication draft to a trip over a table leg in front of a room of students, this panel will discuss how to recover with grace.

Performing a Feminist Sexual Empowerment
Runchao Liu, University of Minnesota, Twin Cities

Four authors will present on various genres of popular culture, ranging from portrayals of the American dream through energy drinks, looking at NFL fans’ negative comments about their favorite teams, the fantasy of democracy in a Chinese singing competition show, and feminist sexual empowerment. These authors will explore these various topics drawing upon a variety of theories to uncover the underlying assumption in popular media.
Difference can mean many things. It can refer to a distinctive way of knowing. It can refer to intersecting ways of being. It also can refer to ways of performing an identity in interpersonal, public, or mediated contexts. Further, difference also names a critical perspective that seeks to reveal and critique repressive hierarchies and inequities.

In this interactive class, we will examine how aspects of difference play out in our Central States region and globally. Come willing to share your stories of discovery and difficulty with difference, to discuss representations of difference on social media, and to create strategies for understanding and including difference.

Participants will emerge from the session with an action plan that describes how aspects of difference will be incorporated into future interrogations of your own positionality, communication pedagogy, research, and community involvement.

   Comfort Tosin Adebayo, University of Wisconsin, Milwaukee

Each presenter will share a class-tested teaching activity in a roundtable forum. These Great Ideas can be adapted and used in a many different communication courses. Approximately every 10 minutes, audience members will change presenters and listen to another exciting Great Idea. Audience members will be able to meet with six or seven presenters in the session.
Crystallized Teaching Methods: Using Different Teaching to Understand How Communication Organizes Differently

Co-Sponsors: Communication Education Interest Group
Organizational and Professional Communication Interest Group

Chair: Amanda Gunn, Denison University

Presenters:
Sarah E. Riforgiate, Kansas State University
Andrea L. Meluch, Indiana University, South Bend
DeAnne Priddis, Middle Tennessee State University
Laura D. Russell, Denison University
Sarah Symonds LeBlanc, Indiana University Purdue University, Fort Wayne
Katherine J. Denker, Ball State University

A picture is worth a thousand words, yet learning is often text-based. Since communication organizes ways of knowing, this panel utilizes Ellingson’s (2009) work on Crystallization to develop innovative teaching techniques that privilege visual learning and communication. Presenters will share visual class activities – drawing, imaged-based presentations, visual writing, dialogical exercises, and photovoice – designed to invite different ways of understanding and critiquing institutional structures such as ideal worker norms, gender assumptions, mental health, and educational contexts.

You Can’t Do That Online – But WE Do! Bridging the Differences Between Classroom and Online Teaching Environments (Top Panel)

Sponsor: Instructional Resources Interest Group

Chair: America Edwards, Western Michigan University

Presenters:
Anke Wolbert, Eastern Michigan University
Leah M. Omilion-Hodges, Western Michigan University
Carrie Reif, University of Southern Mississippi
Valerie Kretz, St. Norbert College
Annette N. Hamel, Western Michigan University
Kathleen Propp, Western Michigan University
Scott E. Shank, Western Michigan University

Many instructors feel it is impossible to teach communication effectively in the online environment. Panelists will share their best practices and encourage other teachers of communication to find ways to adapt traditional communication courses for online delivery. Courses will include nonverbal, interpersonal, race/ethnicity, public relations, and how to create “face to face” feedback on student assignments. They are teaching communication online when “conventional wisdom” said that it couldn’t be done!

“What Makes Us Different?”: Sustaining Relevance in Progressive Communication Programs (Top Panel)

Sponsor: Undergraduate Education and Administration Section
Chair: Nancy J. Brule, Bethel University

Presenters: Charles R. Bantz, Indiana University Purdue University, Indianapolis
Betsy Wackernagel Bach, University of Montana
Linda B. Dickmeyer, University of Wisconsin, La Crosse
Lawrence R. Frey, University of Colorado
Deleasa Randall-Griffiths, Ashland University
Stephen K. Hunt, Illinois State University
Sandra G. Petronio, Indiana University Purdue University, Indianapolis

The challenges faced by academic programs are mounting each year. In the communication discipline, programs are being threatened with downsizing/closure as a result of budget shortfalls in their respective institutions. Departments need to be responsive to the challenges posed by diminishing financial resources, increasing costs, and significant societal and technological changes. Staying innovative in creating successful and relevant communication programs is an important activity for all departments who wish to sustain themselves and grow.

State of South Dakota Showcase – Adapting to Changing Student Demographics in the Foundations of Communication Course

Sponsor: States Advisory Council
Chair: Joshua N. Westwick, South Dakota State University

Presenters: Aimee A. Sorensen, University of South Dakota
Jill Tyler, University of South Dakota
Emily Niebrugge, University of South Dakota

High school and college teachers are dealing with a very different set of students than were populating our classrooms a few years ago. How do we adapt our communication curriculum to accommodate technology natives, non-native-English speakers, international students, under-prepared students, veterans, and older students – all while modeling the cultural inclusion we value?

Respondent: Jessica Prody, St. Lawrence University

Emily Doe’s Statement to Brock Turner: A Case for Long-Term Effectiveness Evaluation in Rhetorical Studies
  Kathryn Swenson, Governors State University
  Lara C. Stache, Governors State University

Privileged Vulnerability: Embodied Pedagogy as Critical Rhetorical Praxis
  Danielle M. Stern, Christopher Newport University

White Feminism and the Ego-Function of Constituting Social Movements
  Megan Orcholski, University of Wisconsin, Milwaukee

This panel brings together a variety of methodological approaches and critical readings in critical feminist rhetoric(s). The authors introduce a number of terms and strategies including (1) long term effectiveness evaluation, (2) privileged vulnerability, and (3) the ego-function within white feminism that encourage us to reflect on how we, as scholars, conduct our current and future research and teaching. Collectively, these papers decenter and reframe notions of voice, privilege, embodiment, and subjectivity in our contemporary political and pedagogical discourses.

Difference Erased: Access(ibility) in the Introductory Course

Sponsor: Basic Course Interest Group
Chair: Sandra L. Pensoneau-Conway, Southern Illinois University, Carbondale

Presenters: Ahmet Atay, College of Wooster
  Deanna L. Fassett, San Jose State University
  Meggie Mapes, University of Kansas
  C. Kyle Rudick, University of Northern Iowa
  Darren J. Valenta, Southern Illinois University, Carbondale

Expanding disciplinary conversations, this panel will critically interrogate access(ibility) within the introductory course curriculum, textbook selection, and expected assignment requirements—accounting for shifting contexts and trends in online teaching, technological expansion, and open pedagogy. Far from “basic,” instructional practices must include reflective interrogations of accessibility for introductory courses to remain relevant and responsive to student lives, regardless of abilities. This panel expands dialogue to investigate access(ibility) within introductory course design.

Darren J. Valenta, Southern Illinois University, Carbondale

This is What Mental Illness Looks Like: The Dark Carnival of “A to Z of Mental Health” and “Depressiongrams”
Tucker Robinson, University of Missouri, Columbia

This panel highlights papers that bring rhetorical theory and criticism and health communication together in innovative ways. The authors explore (1) the rhetorical construction a “caregiving crisis” in unpaid family caregiving, (2) the contestation and reimagining of the she-ro breast cancer survivor through subversive humor, and (3) how digital forms of visual expression empower individuals with a mental illness to challenge stereotypes, social stigmas, and misconceptions surrounding mental health. Their work encourages us to think expansively about rhetorical perspectives on health and healthcare and to embrace different frameworks and approaches in our research.

Chair: Lance Brendan Young, Western Illinois University, Quad Cities

Presenters: Cristin A. Compton, Kent State University
Debbie S. Dougherty, University of Missouri, Columbia
Marlo Goldstein Hode, University of Missouri, Columbia
Kathleen J. Krone, University of Nebraska, Lincoln

Communication scholars have long challenged the position that organizational culture can be strategically manipulated, yet organizations persist in the practice of requiring sexual harassment and diversity training, which are often perceived by members at best as ineffective, and at worst, as punishment. This expert panel will consider the evidence base for various diversity training practices and suggest what to keep, what to stop doing, what to adopt, how to evaluate, and what requires further research.

Presenters: Amanda Brown, University of Wisconsin, Stout
Joy L. Daggs, Northwest Missouri State University
Kathie Kallevig, Yavapai College
Jacki Brucher Moore, Kirkwood Community College
Adam Tyma, University of Nebraska, Omaha

To say that women are underrepresented in media, such as film and television is a dramatic understatement. Nearly any female character in a lead role, or even females in stories that pass the Bechdel Test, are often labeled feminist. However, which female characters are, or are not feminists or good for feminism, is debatable. This panel explores that debate and seeks to challenge and expand the accepted notions of feminist characters.

Trigger warnings are short alerts shared at the beginning of stories, performances, or depictions where the content may elicit emotional turbulence for an audience member. Typically, trigger warnings, like viewer discretions or film ratings, are accompanied by the invitation for the audience member to excuse himself or herself with grace to avoid unnecessary trauma. This panel will provide papers exploring experiences of forensics judges who do not have the option to excuse themselves from triggering performances.

ESL Only Speech Classes? It’s Up for Debate

Second Negative: Elizabeth N. Ribarsky, University of Illinois, Springfield

Some universities have proposed ESL only sections of public speaking, hoping these students will feel less judgment/pressure and reduce anxiety by being surrounded by students experiencing a similar challenge. But, what is lost and gained in these segregated classrooms? This panel will be a debate format. Once the debate is complete, the panelists will open the floor to the audience to engage in discussion with the debaters and other attendees to generate insightful dialogue.

Economic Issues in Higher Education: Setting the Agenda Part II

Sponsor: Blair Thompson, President
Chair: Blair Thompson, President
Members: Christina S. Beck, Ohio University
J. Kevin Barge, Texas A&M University
C. Kyle Rudick, University of Northern Iowa
Christine L. North, Ohio Northern University
Shannon C. VanHorn, Valley City State University
Trevor S. Parry-Giles, National Communication Association

This closed work session will involve setting an agenda for the presidential economic initiative in higher education. These task force members will brainstorm, outline goals for this initiative, and work towards setting an initial set of action items for this initiative. Given the economic struggles higher education presently faces within our region and beyond, this task force has the potential to help CSCA take on an important advocacy role on this front.

Workshop with Keynote Speaker—The Changing Landscape of Identity: Understanding and Supporting Students of All Gender Identities and Sexual Orientations

Sponsor: Amy Aldridge Sanford, First Vice President
Chair: Molly C. Turner, Northeastern State University
Presenter: Robyn Ochs

Our teens and twenties are times of exploration, discovery and growth. For non-heterosexual students, this is a time when presumptive labels and sexuality are called into question. Robyn will discuss her work with teens and young adults, and share some of her observations and the lessons she has learned.
Listening to Difference: Autoethnographic Reflections on Sound, Music, and the Aural World

Sponsor: Performance Studies and Autoethnography Interest Group
Chair: Michael Will, Ball State University
Respondent: Tasha R. Dunn, University of Nebraska, Kearney

Presenters: Stephanie L. Young, University of Southern Indiana
Ben Luttrull, University of Southern Indiana
Blake Paxton, Saint Xavier University
Art Herbig, Indiana University Purdue University, Fort Wayne
Ahmet Atay, College of Wooster

From the human voice to music, from podcasts to cityscapes, panelists will reflect on their aural experiences of the everyday. The goal of the panel is to examine how sound plays a central role in our embodied narratives and the different ways in which our lives and memories are shaped by geographies of sound. Ultimately, we hope to bring the audience into conversation with the aural imagination.

Bridging Associations: How Can NCA Support Community Colleges?

Co-Sponsors: Amy Aldridge Sanford, First Vice President
Community College Interest Group

Chair: David T. McMahan, Missouri Western State University

Presenters: David L. Bodary, Sinclair Community College
Richard L. Underwood, Kirkwood Community College
Allison Beltramini, Waubonsee Community College
Julie A. Weishar, Parkland Community College
Jacki Brucher Moore, Kirkwood Community College
David A. Wendt, Keokuk High School & Southeastern Community College
Terri M. Easley-Giraldo, Johnson County Community College

NCA recognizes that the long-term health of the organization and the discipline rests in large part on the health of our community colleges. A task force is working to identify ways to support community college professors and their programs. After a briefing from members of the task force about the work done so far, the floor will be open to discussion and input from the audience to identify how NCA can assist community colleges.

Phillip Perdue, Indiana University

Expanding upon past and current scholarship on the rhetorical functions of space and place, this panel explores the interactive and consequential nature of material rhetorics through the study of walls in urban spaces, museums, the tourist experience of a prison, and even an encounter with Noah’s ark. Together the panelists highlight how physical environments literally and figuratively frame not only our experiences of the places, but our understanding of the people inside and outside of their confines.

Beyond the Board: How a Faculty Internship Can Provide a Different Perspective in the Classroom

Sponsor: Public Relations Interest Group
Chair: Sarah Symonds LeBlanc, Indiana University Purdue University, Fort Wayne

Presenters: Joy L. Dagg; Northwest Missouri State University
Grace Niemeyer, Northwest Missouri State University

As higher education moves toward a more profession based model, communication programs need to insure that they are keeping a current connection to industry. Many departments use Professional Advisory Committees, but the Plank Center for Leadership in Public Relations offers educators the opportunity to apply for a faculty internship. The experience can provide benefits for both the faculty member and the students. This panel will discuss the Plank Center Fellowship and the impact it has on faculty and students.
Why is Your Teaching Style so Different? International Teaching Assistants and Pop Culture References

Sponsor: Intercultural Communication Interest Group
Chair: Jeff Ching-Fan Lai, University of Wisconsin, Milwaukee
Presenters:
- Mike Allen, University of Wisconsin, Milwaukee
- Dakota Horn, Illinois State University
- Uttara Manohar, University of Wisconsin, La Crosse
- Seokhoon Ahn, St. Cloud State University
- Kavya Pavitra, University of Oklahoma
- Comfort Tosin Adebayo, University of Wisconsin, Milwaukee
- Mary Hogg, Western Illinois University

This panel seeks to unveil possible challenges international teaching assistants (ITAs) encounter in the classroom when students reference the American popular culture. Many times ITAs are not familiar with these cultural artifacts, and this often challenges the perceived competence of ITAs. Popular culture reference is a huge part of the U.S. classroom learning system. The panel’s discussions will revolve around how an ITA can gain competence in their knowledge of U.S. pop culture with some suggestions.

Shannon C. VanHorn, Communication Speech & Theater Association of North Dakota
Kimberly Weismann, Communication Speech & Theater Association of North Dakota
Joshua N. Westwick, Speech Communication Association of South Dakota
Anna Wright, Illinois Communication and Theatre Association
State communication associations face a variety of challenges. Evaporating travel funds. Increased campus demands and time pressures. Proliferation of scholarly organizations and conferences. Escalating expectations for tenure and promotion. Declining memberships and conference attendance. Decreasing interest in association leadership. Yet state associations are in a unique position to provide valuable support and opportunities, often, due to the very challenges they face. This discussion will address the challenges facing state associations, providing insight into successful strategies and best practices.

Intersections of Power, Race, and Sexuality in Adrian Tomine’s Shortcomings
Sidi Becar Meyara, Utah State University

Popular culture has significant rhetorical power to influence racial, gender, and sexual ideologies among viewers. This panel presents three media texts: the reality TV The Bachelor, Disney’s animated film Zootopia, and the graphic novel Shortcomings to explore how the minority identities are marginalized and problematized in these diverse narratives. The presenters’ detailed analysis of the three works illuminates why the study of whiteness is still relevant and crucial in intercultural communication.

Tasha R. Dunn, University of Nebraska, Kearney
Katherine J. Denker, Ball State University
Blake Paxton, St. Xavier University
Nick Iannarino, University of Michigan, Dearborn

Using focus groups, interviews, surveys, and ethnography, the authors argue—through popular press writing—that finding a lifemate has fundamentally changed in the digital age. In this panel, scholars who have used the book Modern Romance, reflect on its pedagogical and scholarly possibilities and examine how we preserve the legacy of a discipline built upon traditional scholarship, yet also embrace the irreverence of genre-bending “scholarship,” to better understand the impact of digital communication technologies on romantic relationships.

Teaching the College Course in Communication Theory

Sponsor: Communication Theory Interest Group
Chair: Andrew M. Ledbetter, Texas Christian University
Presenter: Em Griffin, Wheaton College

Communication Theory is a tough class to teach. For many students, the word theory has negative connotations and instructors are often outside their area of expertise. This panel is crafted for current and future instructors who want to stimulate students to understand, compare, and apply a range of communication theories. Presenters will offer sample syllabi, assignments, methods of evaluation, classroom activities, discussion ideas, video and Internet resources, and a comparison of ten different textbooks.

Suffocating the Grief of Sexual Assault Victims on College Campuses: Disenfranchising the Right to Mourn Former Identities?
  Jessica J. Eckstein, Western Connecticut State University

Grief is a journey that the individual suffering loss travels through with support of others (Doka, 2016). Inspired by Doka’s book, Grief is a Journey, “disenfranchised grief” is the process of grieving loss not recognized or supported by society. This grief creates unique communication challenges, including: feeling marginalized, not receiving adequate social support, losing one’s identity, and suffering relational losses. Members of this panel will discuss how “disenfranchised grief” relates to their specific research areas.

             Ronald L. Jackson, II, NCA President

Interracial communication is a micro discipline within communication, and although the appellation “diversity” embraces a growing number of identities, the nation’s media spotlight features and corroborates the interracial tension of college and university campuses, specifically between African American students and members of the dominant group, including administrators. Voicing dissatisfaction with the status quo, bolstered by reported acts of microagression and derogation, African American students and their sympathizers have constructed many parameters of meaning through organized protests and acts of civil unrest. Protestors have disrupted public spaces and issued demands to be granted by institutions, often in an enumerated platform as an ultimatum, with an accompanying deadline for meeting the demands. Activism among protestors ranges from discursive to less discursive practices, and Midwestern colleges and universities are not immune to unrest and perceived power asymmetries across racial lines. National news features stories about interracial encounters on campuses in Minnesota, the Dakotas, Ohio, Michigan, Kansas, Missouri, Nebraska, Indiana, Wisconsin, Oklahoma, Illinois, and other states. This convention program proposes to problematize interracial encounters and the question phrased by author Paula Giddings’ famous book titled, “When and Where I Enter.” Where do we, as communication scholars, administrators, staff, and students, in CSCA enter the conversation/debate on interracial conflict on our campuses? What should be our goal(s)?: Problem solving? Creating a basis for dialogue, with or without a concrete material goal in mind? Trying to establish law and order from a premise of civility and rationality? Creating a climate of safety on our campuses? Providing the protestors a voice? Sharing the protestors’ pain? This convention program highlights a concept-based approach to
(1) problem-identification in interracial conflicts, often embedded in historical precedent and circumscribed relations, (2) the possibility of a negotiated management of the problems, and (3) the, ironic, dialectic of “separate-but-equal” in the allocation of material resources, as protesting groups form separate, race/identity-based organizations and governing bodies on campuses. Leading this session are two Central States scholars who special in interracial communication: Dorthy Pennington, of the University of Kansas and Mark P. Orbe, of Western Michigan University. The leaders of this session hope that it not only responds to an exigence, but also leads to future CSCA scholarship and programming in interracial communication in areas such as, signification by speaking between the margins, material rhetoric, identity and interpretation of spatial dislocation, social justice modalities, autoethnography, interracial communication competencies and satisfaction, navigating schematic incompatibilities, and administrative management of discord.

Response to Diversity Crisis: Challenges and Strategies for Effective Intercultural Education

Sponsor: Intercultural Communication Interest Group
Chair: Seokhoon Ahn, St. Cloud State University

Presenters: Eddah Mbula Mutua, St. Cloud State University
Jennifer Hawkins, University of Wisconsin, Stout
Susie Lamborn, University of Wisconsin, Milwaukee
Jonathan B. Dellinger, University of Wisconsin, Milwaukee

This panel aims to address the two following issues in intercultural education: first, to discuss challenges and difficulties of teaching intercultural communication, and second, to share pedagogical strategies for an effective intercultural education curriculum. Specifically, the panelists will present their pedagogical principles and skills for intercultural education, ranging from designing assignments and evaluations, to developing in-classroom activities, to engaging class discussions on sensitive interracial topics, and to creating diversity training programs for online seminars.

State of North Dakota Spotlight - Teaching Privilege to Midwestern Students

Sponsor: States Advisory Council
Chair: Becky Timmerman DeGreeff, Kansas State University, Polytechnic Campus

Presenters: Shannon C. VanHorn, Valley City State University
            Kimberly Weismann, Williston State College
            Jonna Ziniel, Valley City State University
            Amber Aberle, Valley City State University
            Jaime Meyer, University of Mary

Many people in the Midwest do not feel they have privilege. However, many people do, in fact, have privilege. This panel explores ways of teaching privilege to demographics who do not always believe it exists.
There are many direct benefits of NCA membership. All regular members receive:

- Online access to NCA’s 11 journals, both current and archived.
- Steeply discounted registration rate for NCA’s Annual Convention. Our convention draws more than 5,000 people and features more than 1,000 programmatic sessions.
- Leadership and professional development opportunities.
- Membership in NCA Interest Groups.
- Exclusive members-only content at www.natcom.org, including an extensive teaching and learning resource center; data about the discipline; research, publication, and funding resources; and much more.
- A print subscription to the award-winning Spectra magazine.
- Eligibility to win NCA awards.
- Eligibility for NCA grants.
- And more…

Theoretical Differences in Two Capstone International Addresses: President Obama’s Cairo Speech “A New Beginning” and President Trump’s Riyadh Speech “…Global Terrorism”

Sponsor: Communication Theory Interest Group
Chair: John “Jack” A. Jones, University of Illinois, Chicago
Presenters: Leah E. Bryant, DePaul University
Jessica J. Eckstein, Western Connecticut State University
Samuel Rush, St. Xavier University
Lynn H. Turner, Marquette University

Panelists analyze and challenge the contrastive nature of “otherness” in two definitive international addresses delivered by our current president and previous president. Employing theories such as social judgment theory, expectation violation theory, and metaphoric analysis, the panelists will address issues of potential, immediate, and long-term consequences in the nation’s relations with the global community.

Political Discourse in the Time of “Fake News”

David M. Rhea, Governors State University

Immunized from the Truth: Protecting a World View from Contrary Facts
Todd Hauser, Concordia University, Chicago

The importance of false news reports and “fake news” in the 2016 Presidential Election Cycle cannot be overstated. The term itself is polysemous. It might mean the introduction of false information posing as news. It might mean the scapegoating of factual information as false information. This panel is designed to have scholars analyze the impact of the term “fake news” from a variety of perspectives, and also the implications this has on politics and democracy.

They will also be asked to share tips for building and maintaining mentoring relationships within an academic environment.
Keynote—Beyond Binaries: Identity and Sexuality

Sponsor: Amy Aldridge Sanford, First Vice President
Chair: Sara Baker-Bailey, Southern Connecticut State University

Join your CSCA colleagues for this interactive program, where Robyn will help us explore the landscape of sexuality, conducting a thought-provoking anonymous survey of those present, and look together at the data. Where do we fall on various sexuality continua? How do we label? How old were we when we came to our identities and to our sexualities? How asexual/sexual are we? How well do our friends/family members understand our sexuality? This program will likely expand your perspective and change the way you think about labels.

Robyn Ochs is an educator, speaker, grassroots activist, and editor of two anthologies: the 42-country collection Getting Bi: Voices of Bisexuals around the World (2009) and RECOGNIZE: The Voices of Bisexual Men (2015). In addition, her writings have been published in numerous bi, women’s studies, multicultural, and LGBTQ+ anthologies. Robyn has taught courses on LGBTQ+ history & politics in the United States and Canada, the politics of sexual orientation, and the experiences of those who transgress the binary categories of gay|straight, masculine|feminine, black|white &/or male | female. An advocate for the rights of people of all orientations and genders to live safely, openly and with full access and opportunity, Robyn’s work focuses on increasing awareness and understanding of complex identities, and mobilizing people to be powerful allies to one another within and across identities and social movements. She lives in Massachusetts and on May 17, 2004, the first day it was legal to do so, Robyn married Peg Preble. Robyn served for 12 years on the Board of Directors of MassEquality, Massachusetts’ statewide equality organization and for 3 years on the Massachusetts Commission on LGBTQ Youth. She is the recipient of numerous awards, most recently PFLAG’s Brenda Howard Award, the National LGBT Task Force’s Susan J. Hyde Activism Award and the Harvard Gender & Sexuality Caucus’s Lifetime Achievement Award.

Conferece Yoga

Presenter: Danielle M. Stern, Christopher Newport University

Begin your conference morning with yoga suitable for all levels. Danielle Stern, a member of CSCA since 2006 and a certified yoga instructor since 2015, will guide us through gentle breathing practices, a beginner-friendly flow, and a brief meditation. Danielle is the co-founder of Bhav Brigade, a collective of teachers dedicated to philanthropic, inclusive yoga. Although class is free, attendees are encouraged to donate to the YWCA of Southeast Wisconsin if you are able. A yoga mat or towel is encouraged, but not required, to make your practice more comfortable.

Theorizing Yoga and Communication

Sponsor: Communication Theory Interest Group
Chair: Joseph P. Mazer, Clemson University

Presenters: Noelle Lynn Blood, Washburn University
Art Herbig, Indiana University Purdue University, Fort Wayne
Danielle M. Stern, Christopher Newport University
Adam Tyma, University of Nebraska, Omaha
Molly Waters, Christopher Newport University

This discussion panel features interdisciplinary perspectives around the intersection of communication and yoga. Presenters will make theoretical connections among experiences of integrating yoga into their wellness practice through communication principles of ritual and reflection, founding a yoga collective around theories of social justice, the commodification and fetishizing of spirituality and wellness, the performance of masculinity and femininity in yoga spaces, and the discursive construction of the embodied life as more meaningful when pursued with mindfulness and intention.

Research in cancer communication highlights that little is known about which communicative strategies support and enhance cancer patients’ and partners’ resilience when coping with cancer management. Guided by the Communicative Theory of Resilience (Buzzanell, 2010; Lillie et al., 2017), authors created and tested the Dyadic Cancer Resilience Scale. Participants were recruited from Amazon’s Mechanical Turk and included cancer patients and partners of cancer patients. Participants completed online measures. Results highlight differences across participant role as well as culture.

Recently BBC issued a list of “Seven Ways the World Has Changed” since Donald Trump began his presidency. These changes are pivotally important to discuss as they affect how to engage diverse viewpoints with students. This year, college instruction has become an increasingly scrutinized and self-conscious endeavor. Panelists will address the nature of culture, comedy, commentary, and inquiry as tools to teach students of/in the current political milieu. This panel hopes to spur audience discussion.

Master Class—Experiential Encounter Communication Pedagogy

Co-Sponsor: Amy Aldridge Sanford, First Vice President
Instructional Resources Interest Group

Chair: Quaqilla Rhea Walker, University of Minnesota, Morris

Presenter: Lawrence R. Frey, University of Colorado, Boulder

This session offers a chance to experience (at least, in part) the unique pedagogy of “encounter communication,” a method to facilitate “here-and-now” communication (talking only about what occurs between people in that room), for the purpose of creating meaningful moments of contact among participants. In line with the conference theme, this session focuses on perceived differences among participants, and feelings and potential actions generated by those differences. After experiencing the pedagogy, we will talk about how variations can be employed in courses, such as interpersonal and group communication. If you plan to attend, to save time, please read the following essay (email me and I will send it to you: larry.frey@colorado.edu):

This session is limited to the first 20 participants.

Engaging with Our Partners in the Community: A Conversation with the MKE LGBT Community Center

Sponsor: Sexual Orientation and Gender Identity Caucus
Chair: Sara Baker-Bailey, Southern Connecticut State University

Presenters: Karen Gotzler, MKE LGBT Community Center
Brandon Herr, MKE LGBT Community Center

There is a lot of talk in the discipline regarding applied scholarship, praxis, and community engagement. But do we walk the walk? And do we engage in applied scholarship with our broader community in a meaningful and respectful way? This discussion panel will explore these “town and gown” relationships. Panelists include staff members from the Milwaukee LGBT Community Center. The goal is to engage in a dialogue regarding how our research can be integrated into our broader communities. How can we better translate our research into effective practice? What might LGBTQIA communities need and what role can and should we as academics play?

Each panelist will provide their perspective on one or more of the characters in these stories and how those portrayals may influence the viewers’ and readers’ perspectives on mental illness overall.

Master Class—Communication Privacy Management Theory and Research: Getting to the Bottom of CPM

Co-Sponsors: Amy Aldridge Sanford, First Vice President Communication Theory Interest Group
Chair: Elaina M. Ross, University of Kansas
Presenter: Sandra G. Petronio, Indiana University Purdue University, Indianapolis
Unpacking the paradoxical sense of privacy management seems an increasingly difficult task. With the internet introducing endless examples of privacy breakdowns, it is often unclear whether privacy is still possible. Communication Privacy Management (CPM) theory and research offer a way to more clearly understand the puzzle of privacy. Decisions to reveal or conceal private information are guided by very clear principles. The predictive nature of CPM allows us to recognize the behaviors people enact when granting or deny access to their information, as well as explore issues when receiving private information. Through a discussion of the tenets of CPM theory across and within contexts such as families, healthcare, and social media, this interactive class uncovers some of the hidden assumptions people make about regulating their privacy and answers the puzzle of privacy management across contexts, countries, and concepts.

Sponsor: States Advisory Council
Chair: Josh Fitzgerald, Illinois State University

Presenters: Randy K. Dillon, Missouri State University
Scott L. Jensen, Webster University
William Lindsey, Lee A. Tolbert Academy
Central to our students’ growth as communicators is an ability to engage conflict with confidence and civility. This program outlines a research-based rationale for incorporating conflict, forgiveness, and civil discourse in our schools’ curricula, including course outlines and activities with theoretical and experiential promotion of these critical skills. Panelists provide reflections on generational, high school, and personal advocacy and identity as contexts for program content.

Different Conversations: Facilitating Discussions of Difference in the Undergraduate Classroom

Sponsor: Instructional Resources Interest Group
Chair: Nancy Burrell, University of Wisconsin, Milwaukee

Presenters: Anna Herrman, St. Norbert College
Rebecca Mullane, Moraine Park Technical College
Melissa Maier, University of Wisconsin, Stevens Point
Kim Smith, St. Norbert College
Katie Turkiewicz, University of Wisconsin, Green Bay

Engaging students in difference discussions can be challenging and uncomfortable. However, if executed effectively, these conversations provide students opportunities to explore what difference means. The communication classroom is an ideal space to examine how we communicate differently and develop strategies for engaging in different conversations. Panel participants discuss approaches to facilitating difference discussions in the classroom, activities for engaging students in different conversations, and assessment strategies for measuring critical thinking related to difference.

Austin J. Beattie, University of Iowa
Maureen J. Wieland, Purdue University
Bailey C. Benedict, Purdue University
Keith Bistodeau, Hamline University

The tenure track is often referred to as a state of publish or perish. Consequently, many scholars’ desire to see a social impact becomes subordinated, as service often ranks lowest among the three pillars of academic achievement: research, teaching, and service. Thus, panelists offer alternative ways to make a difference in communities and extend communication research beyond conference presentation and publication, including engaging with bloggers and non-profits, spotlighting scholars, and podcasting.

The Shifting Applications of Social Media in the Evolution of Slow Moving Crises: Hurricane Irma as a Case Study

Timothy L. Sellnow, University of Central Florida
Deborah Sellnow-Richmond, Columbus State University
Social media can be an efficient communication tool during crises. As crisis communication seeks to create shared meaning with and between impacted publics and the response community, social media’s ability to rapidly create, disseminate, and/or correct information during crises is a significant topic for scholarly inquiry. Therefore, this panel will discuss social media’s various communicative functions during crises, providing examples from Hurricane Irma, Montana wildfires, Flint, Michigan’s water crisis, haze issues in China, and Southwest airlines.

Dusting off the Curriculum: Making a Difference with Innovative Approaches in the Basic Course

Sponsor: Basic Course Interest Group
Chair: Sandra L. Pensoneau-Conway, Southern Illinois University, Carbondale

Presenters:
Laura Jacobi, Minnesota State University, Mankato
Kristen Cvancara, Minnesota State University, Mankato
Stevie Munz, Utah Valley University
Michael E. Burns, Texas State University
Jeff Fox, Northern Kentucky University

What are some recent differences in the innovations of the basic course? How do these differences involve technology and influence retention? Panelists will discuss innovative approaches and corresponding research conducted on their campuses. The effects upon student learning outcomes and retention are explored within various contexts: online, hybrid, and face-to-face formats; virtual speaking sessions; persuasive speaking assignments, and interactive e-books. Together, these projects seek continued improvement of the basic course in ways that will help to make a difference in the field of Communication.

Make the Empire Great Again: Klingons as Representations of the Alt-Right in Star Trek: Discovery
   Shanna R. Gilkeson, Bowling Green State University

Spanning television series and films, Star Trek has enjoyed fifty years of popularity. Star Trek: Discovery continues the tradition of telling stories about today’s human condition through futuristic settings. In Discovery, the Klingons, a war-like alien race, demonstrate traits such as revivalist nationalism, religious fundamentalism, racism, and other extreme conservative ideals. Through textual analysis, I deconstruct the Klingons to argue they are an allegory for – and reaction to – today’s Trumpism and the alt-right.

Devouring the Monstrous SJW in Eli Roth’s “The Green Inferno”
Matt Foy, Upper Iowa University

A Thousand Sitcoms: A Rhizomatic Analysis of Television Sitcoms
Nettie Brock, University of Missouri, Columbia

This panel begins with a unique original media entry, “Expecting Rain,” which the creators call an existential, auto-ethnographic serial comic that presents the mundane, and not so mundane, aspects of everyday life through the comic series in an aesthetic, meaningful manner. It then turns to an analysis of the 2013 film The Green Inferno and discourses surrounding it as articulation of conservative hostility and anxiety toward so-called “social justice warriors.” Finally, sitcoms are considered as part of a media ecology that reflects mores of society in an era utilizing a “rhizomatic framework.”

Donald P. Jones, Trine University
Kendra Knight, DePaul University
Anita Mixon, Wayne State University
James M. Proszek, Northwestern University
Shrinkhala Upadhyaya, Bowling Green State University
Jennifer L. Walton, Ohio Northern University
This discussion panel focuses on the “macro” aspects of the basic course and addresses the challenges and benefits of the often required standing of the course (departmentally or institutionally). Discussion topics include: scheduling, standardization, assessment, historical place within higher education, and often the precarious status within the general education curriculum. The panel participants represent a breadth of academic rank and institutional diversity.

  Kirsten Theye, Concordia College, Moorhead
  Kirsten Stave, Concordia College, Moorhead

This panel brings together papers on rhetoric and new media that explore the different ways various communities adapt and negotiate language through digital platforms to come together in the face of politically and socially divisive events. From online parodies of a trauma that never was, to the transcendental ideograph of family as a televised form of apologia, to the role of a single hashtag in promoting social activism on social media, these panelists skillfully demonstrate the challenges and possibilities of doing rhetorical criticism in the digital age.

Spotlight Panel—Ethical Dilemmas Professors Face When Expressing Publicly Their Political Viewpoints

Co-Sponsors: Communication Ethics, Activism and Social Justice Interest Group
Chair: Kristine M. Nicolini, University of Wisconsin, Oshkosh

Presenters: Terri M. Easley-Giraldo, Johnson County Community College
Melody Hoffmann, Anoka-Ramsey Community College
Controversial political matters call upon college professors to occupy multiple roles. While they stand in positions of power to voice their viewpoints publically, they may also encounter backlash from students and/or institutions when doing so. Through examining this dilemma, panelists engage the following questions: What are college professors' ethical commitments and responsibilities for engaging in the political, public sphere? What is at stake when embracing advocacy roles on campuses and in surrounding communities?

Kate Brockway, Kansas State University, Polytechnic Campus
Jonna Ziniel, Valley City State University
Amanda Brown, University of Wisconsin, Stout
Becky Timmerman DeGreeff, Kansas State University, Polytechnic Campus

With the emphasis in higher education on encouraging students to pursue STEM careers, less emphasis is placed upon the significance and value of the arts and humanities. The importance of emphasizing the arts and humanities (e.g. Communication) and implementing a STEAM model in higher education will be the focus of this panel. Panelists will discuss their perspectives, offer ideas for involvement with STEM majors and curriculum and relationship building with STEM departments.

Presenters: Sydney O’Shay Wallace, Wayne State University
Patrick Seick, Southern Illinois University, Carbondale
Spencer Coile, Ball State University
Timothy Ward, Eastern Michigan University
Casey Sabella, Ball State University
Nicole Richards, Eastern Michigan University

In this panel, we reflect on our personal classroom experiences negotiating the tension between pragmatism and social justice praxis. We also offer strategies for treating ‘difference’ humanely within an increasingly resource-stressed university setting. Discussion topics include strategies for student/teacher humanization, navigating diversity/difference in mass lecture-style classrooms, the neo-liberalization of higher education, and the necessity of diverse mentor relationships. Time will be provided for audience interaction.

Barriers to Speaking about Individual Rights, Difference and Liberty on College Campuses

Sponsor: Community College Interest Group
Chair: Cheryl L. Skiba-Jones, Trine University

Presenters: Jeremy Basso, City Colleges of Chicago
Kathleen Edelmayer, Madonna University
Aaron V. Burton, Tiffin University
Ahmet Atay, College of Wooster

Barriers to free speech on college campuses are occurring more frequently. Communicators need to take a look at the risks and responsibilities that accompany free speech and examine solutions to deal with different opinions, complex issues, and potential violence. Panelists will share their viewpoints, examples and suggestions regarding the right of colleges to promote communication of the expression of free speech, differences and liberty in America.

In recent years, stating preferred gender pronouns has become more common during class introductions. Though well intentioned, instructors must consider how to include such disclosures in introductions without making transgender or otherwise gender non-conforming persons feel targeted, tokenized, or forced to come out to the rest of the class before they feel comfortable. Here, panelists and audience members will discuss their own strategies for fostering success for transgender and/or gender non-conforming students and instructors.

Chair: Alberto González, Bowling Green State University

Presenters: Christine L. North, Ohio Northern University
Nina Gjoci, Bowling Green State University
Eun Young Lee, Florida Gulf Coast University
Satoshi Toyosaki, Southern Illinois University, Carbondale

Intercultural communication and global studies pedagogy can sometimes pose a challenge, especially when discussing sensitive topics or when teaching in politically charged climates. The current conflictual global situation and U.S. political climate can lead to tense discussions around culture, race, religion, nationality, gender identity, and other topics involving difference. Discussants discuss pedagogical tools and techniques to help with these difficult discussions and describe strategies used to break down barriers in the classroom.

CSCA Scholar Conversations features panel-length interviews with one outstanding scholar reflecting on his or her most important scholarship and contributions. These are scholars who have made substantial contributions, whose work has stood the test of time, and who have made a difference in the discipline and beyond. There will be an extended interview followed by questions and discussion with those in attendance.

Helping Students Move Forward: Using Minority Mentoring Programs to Create a More Inclusive Academia

Co-Sponsors: Amy Aldridge Sanford, First Vice President
Graduate Student Caucus
Chair: Josh Ratel-Khan, Ball State University

Presenters: Robin Phelps-Ward, Clemson University
Kristen McCauliff, Ball State University
Scarlett Hester, College of Wooster
Kyle B. Heuett, Ball State University
Mariann Fant, Ball State University
Katherine J. Denker, Ball State University
Isa Escobio, Ball State University
In order to develop a more inclusive and diverse faculty, communication scholars need to make strategic mentoring choices. We discuss the development, implementation, maintenance, and outcomes of one minority focused mentoring program aimed at increasing the diversity of our graduate students and also the faculty at our university. Panelists include the program designer, faculty, former mentees (now faculty), as well as current students. We will focus on challenges, opportunities, and advice for developing similar programs.

Creating PR Opportunities to Make a Difference

Sponsor: Public Relations Interest Group
Chair: Samentha Sepulveda, University of Wisconsin, Milwaukee

Presenters: Kristine M. Nicolini, University of Wisconsin, Oshkosh
DeAnne Priddis, Middle Tennessee State University
Nancy Burrell, University of Wisconsin, Milwaukee
Andrew Cole, University of Wisconsin, Whitewater
Thomas A. Salek, University of Wisconsin, Stevens Point

Communication scholars can make a difference beyond the classroom by partnering with organizations within the community. This panel highlights successful individuals who have combined scholarship, teaching and community service by taking the steps necessary to “tell their story” to a broader audience. Through the use of public relations, networking, and marketing, panelists will share how audience members can also follow this path, developing new relationships and opportunities to reach a broader, more diverse audience.

Connecting with FYE Students: How to Make a Difference in Their Lives!!

Co-Sponsors: Undergraduate Education and Administration Section
Instructional Resources
Chair: Stacey M. Macchi, Western Illinois University

Presenters: Joy L. Daggs, Northwest Missouri State University
John Stanley, North Central College
Brenna Smith, Western Illinois University
Amy Buxbaum, North Central College

Many colleges and universities have First Year Experience (FYE) programs intended to aid students in their transition to college life, but how successful are these programs? Panelists will discuss how instructors have found success building connections and engaging first year students. Additional FYE topics include using peer mentors as role models, integrating differences in curriculum, aiding students in recognizing academic skills for success, organizing service learning projects, reviewing and assessing first year programs and finally helping students navigate the challenges they face getting involved in campus life.

Master Class—Critical Communication Pedagogy as Intentional Engagement of Difference

Co-Sponsors: Amy Aldridge Sanford, First Vice President
Communication Education Interest Group
Chair: Mir Ashfaquzzaman, University of Northern Iowa
Presenter: Deanna L. Fassett, San José State University

In this interactive workshop, we will define and discuss critical communication pedagogy as explicitly resistive of dehumanization in all forms, including within and regarding the classroom. In doing so, we will explore critical communication pedagogy as agenda- and intention-setting practice for and with our students and ourselves. And, in particular, we will address the internal tension posed by identifying, engaging and challenging ideology in teaching and learning--including any discomfort or dissonance that may stem from introducing social justice as a guiding principle in the communication classroom.

Sponsor: States Advisory Council
Chair: Jessica M. Peterson, University of South Dakota

Presenters: Elizabeth Sills, Northern State University
Emily Niebrugge, University of South Dakota
Aimee A. Sorensen, University of South Dakota
Jill Tyler, University of South Dakota

Most of us are delighted when our communication serves to please, delight, or amuse one another, but very little study has focused on how humor and laughter are related to the communication process. Even less work has been done with female humorists. Join us as we make a light-hearted exploration of the philosophy, theory, practice, and effects of feminist humor.

“Publish or Perish” and Ever After…: Discussing the Threat of Academic Burnout

Sponsor: Women’s Caucus
Chair: Leah A. Bryant, DePaul University

Presenters: Katie Lever, Western Connecticut State University
Elizabeth N. Ribarsky, University of Illinois, Springfield
Ahmet Atay, College of Wooster
Christine L. North, Ohio Northern University

To achieve tenure and promotion, faculty members are encouraged to join numerous committees, publish and present, while maintaining stellar teaching records. Research indicates that women face particularly challenging and stressful experiences when applying for tenure. Given these challenges, do the pressures decrease after tenure? Can we maintain this stamina? Does that sense of motivation stay? This panel will discuss academic burnout and various strategies academics use to combat this phenomenon. Audience member participation is highly encouraged.

Making the Conscious Unconscious: Striving for Authentic Identity in the Music of Bob Dylan
Stephen Dine Young, Hanover College

The panel begins with a philosophical exploration of identity and difference through a Heideggerian lens. These broad theoretical issues will be further examined by looking at the work of Buber, Laing & Freire, but will also be contextualized in dialogical interpersonal communication. The second half of the presentation will move into the mass communication arena by considering the strained but appealing relationship between music fans and rock stars—My Morning Jacket, and Bob Dylan—as they simultaneously form a community and strive for individuation.

Master Class—Experiential Encounter Communication Pedagogy

Co-Sponsor: Amy Aldridge Sanford, First Vice President
Instructional Resources Interest Group
Chair: Malynnda Johnson, Indiana State University
Presenter: Lawrence R. Frey, University of Colorado, Boulder
This session offers a chance to experience (at least, in part) the unique pedagogy of “encounter communication,” a method to facilitate “here-and-now” communication (talking only about what occurs between people in that room), for the purpose of creating meaningful moments of contact among participants. In line with the conference theme, this session focuses on perceived differences among participants, and feelings and potential actions generated by those differences. After experiencing the pedagogy, we will talk about how variations can be employed in courses, such as interpersonal and group communication. If you plan to attend, to save time, please read the following essay (email me and I will send it to you: larry.frey@colorado.edu):

This session is limited to the first 20 participants.

This discussion panel is comprised of scholars all concerned with addressing issues faced by the queer community. Together, we will discuss the meaning of “queer” and the tensions inherent in teaching, researching, and advocating for queer concerns. Some questions we will consider include: What does ‘queer’ mean? Who counts as 'queer'?’ How does one do 'queer' research? How do we police 'queer' scholarship and activism? What does inclusivity look like in 'queer' work?

Speaking across the Discipline: Celebrating Institutional Differences in Speaking Instruction and Assessment

Sponsor: Instructional Resources Interest Group
Chair: Rachel D. Davidson, Hanover College

Presenters: Bradley Gangnon, University of Wisconsin, Superior
Lara C. Stache, Governors State University
Jeremy V. Adolphson, Gustavus Adolphus College
William Bettler, Hanover College

This panel will share instructional resources and assessment ideas for speaking courses and assignments. Topics include: best practices in speaking instruction in non-public speaking courses; assessing speaking in communication and non-communication courses; and innovative speaking assignments focused on advocacy and social justice. The panel celebrates the 2018 theme of “Difference” by acknowledging the different types of learners that we serve, and exploring the corresponding differences in the techniques and strategies of speaking assessment and instruction.
Research in Progress Roundtables

Sponsor: Sexual Orientation and Gender Identity Caucus
Chair: Karina Willes, University of Wisconsin, Milwaukee

The goal of this panel is to explore and discuss emerging areas for research that focus on topics related to sexual orientation and/or gender identity. We welcome research from a diverse array of areas of interest (e.g. interpersonal, organizational, instructional, pop culture, rhetoric, media studies, etc.) and methodological backgrounds. Panelists and participants will breakout into small discussion groups for the purposes of workshopping research, providing feedback, and facilitating collaborations among participants. Participants are encouraged to bring in-progress research, project ideas, and research questions.

Bridging Rhetoric and Intercultural Communication

Sponsor: Rhetorical Theory and Criticism Interest Group
Chair: Alberto González, Bowling Green State University

Navigating the Labyrinth: Making a Difference with Mentoring

Sponsor: Adjunct/Temporary Faculty Caucus
Chair: Amanda Brown, University of Wisconsin, Stout

Presenters: Heather Nesemeier, Minnesota State University, Moorhead
Ali Gattoni, University of Wisconsin, Milwaukee
Richard Schutta, University of Wisconsin, Stout & River Falls
Anne Kerber, Minnesota State University, Mankato
Jeffrey T. Child, Kent State University
Adam Tyma, University of Nebraska, Omaha

This discussion panel will explore the great potential in having mentoring opportunities, both formal and informal, for new faculty, whether adjunct, temporary, or tenure track, to partner with a more senior member of their campus faculty and make a difference in the experiences had by the individual. Having mentor relationships creates an opportunity for discussions of division of labor, workload, and service expectations that may or may not have the opportunity to pop up in casual conversation around the water cooler or coffee pot. Additionally, options for networking and building community will be discussed when traditional opportunities present themselves and when faculty are online.

Presenters: Ashley Pikel, South Dakota State University
Emily Niebrugge, University of South Dakota
Nick Lorang, South Dakota State University
Kendall Uhrich, South Dakota State University
Shala Larson, South Dakota State University

In today’s American society, there has been widespread conversation about celebrities using their familiarity in society to advocate for issues. Most recently, when President Trump denounced former NFL quarterback, Colin Kaepernick, for kneeling during the National Anthem. The election of President Trump has also elicited responses from famous individuals to use award shows and social media to denounce the inequalities in society and actions made by our government. This panel seeks to explore the role of the activist celebrity in today’s American society.

Original Media: Exploring Difference in Film

Sponsor: Media Studies Interest Group
Chair: Richard Schutta, University of Wisconsin, Stout & River Falls
Respondent: Thomas A. Salek, University of Wisconsin, Stevens Point

Myra’s Distinction
Miranda Smith, Indiana Purdue University, Fort Wayne

The Open Door
Steven F. Zambo, Wisconsin Lutheran College

In this Original Media panel, films that explore difference will be screened and discussed. In the student-produced film “Myra’s Distinction,” the lead character’s “A+ lifestyle comes to a screeching halt when an unnatural earthquake takes place. Now she fights for her normal life back before the valedictorian distinction goes to someone else.” In the faculty-produced “The Open Door,” the lead character (and actor who portrays that character) is autistic, and the film explores how “some people, like him, wear their needs on the outside for everyone to see. Others keep them hidden deep inside.” Panelists will discuss the meaning of difference, how film can uniquely contribute to understanding difference, and the roles of faculty and students in writing and producing film exploring these concepts.

Annual President Party: Celebrating the Service of Blair Thompson with Milwaukee’s Best

Sponsored by Western Kentucky University and Taylor & Francis.

Join us to celebrate the service of Blair Thompson, who at the time of this party will have just moved into the role of Past President. We’ll celebrate by sampling some of Milwaukee’s best food and beverage, ranging from locally cured meats to the tastiest cheeses, from locally made sodas to a fantastic lineup of Milwaukee beers that we are calling “Blair’s Brews.”

Don’t miss this opportunity to close the convention by celebrating with colleagues and enjoying much of the best that Milwaukee has to offer! During his time in the CSCA Presidential rotation, Blair has worked diligently to advance a number of important initiatives for the association. This party—complete with a champagne toast—is but a small token of our appreciation!
